

VISITORS TO LONG POINT BIRD OBSERVATORY WELCOME

North America's oldest bird observatory, at Long Point, Ontario, always welcomes visitors, but we wish to extend a special invitation to ornithologists and naturalists planning to attend the meetings of the International Council for Bird Preservation (ICBP) and/or the International Ornithological Congress (IOC) in June 1986. Information on how to get there will be available at both meetings, and a list of accommodation in the area will also be supplied. For visitors who prefer to come prior to the meetings, information can be obtained by writing us at Box 160, Port Rowan, Ontario NOE 1M0, Canada, or by 'phoning (519) 586-2909. While we welcome you at any time, advance notification will help ensure a more worthwhile visit. Long Point is about a six or seven hour drive from Kingston, and eight or nine hours from Ottawa.
